HISTORY

“THE PATH TO END TERRORISM IN SPAIN”

On October 20, 2011 three masked members of ETA announced, “the definitive end of (our) armed activities”. For more than 40 years, this terrorist organization had been murdering, maiming and extorting people in Spain, in its drive for the independence of the Basque Country (called Euskadi in vernacular), one of the Northern territories among Spain’s 17 autonomous regions. From 2011 on, ETA has remained inactive. Its existence had become an anachronism in the political history of the European Union. The demise of ETA marks the beginning of a period of gradual normalization in the Basque society.

“NO ROAD IS AN EASY ROAD”

As football agent Amalio Flores states, “For every player that makes it to the top, for every Messi and Maradona, there are thousands of kids who never reach their goal... and the pressure that comes from their families is so strong, that some of them even end up going the wrong way. They bet it all for football, and didn’t study, becoming broken toys”. The pressure coming from the kid’s parents, who hope their children will take them out of poverty; dirty practices and sly deception techniques from many agents; overly assertive coaching tactics and excessive demand from clubs. I Want to Be Messi is a documentary that shows the dark side of the most popular sport in the world, by following the paths of kids who live on the outskirts of Buenos Aires and who have bet everything on their dreams of one day becoming football stars.
